The National Black Church Initiative Calls on President Obama to Order Attorney General Holder and Justice Department to Ask the State of Georgia for a Judicial Review of the Case of Troy Davis

Are High Ranking African American Elected Officials Going to Allow the Execution Occur Without a Legal Review?

Washington, DC – The National Black Church Initiative (NBCI), a faith-based coalition of 34,000 churches comprised of 15 denominations and 15.7 million African Americans calls upon President Obama to use his presidential powers and order Attorney General Holder and Justice Department to ask the State of Georgia for a Judicial Review of the Case against Troy Davis. This review will allow the government time to be satisfied that all the facts are in order before they put to death an innocent man. NBCI pleads with President Obama to show some moral backbone and adhere to the teachings of his faith.

Thou shall not kill. God is the author and finisher of life.

This portion of the press release was issued on September 19, 2011 before the Georgia's Board of Pardons and Paroles denied clemency to Troy Davis

The National Black Church Initiative (NBCI), a faith-based coalition of 34,000 churches comprised of 15 denominations and 15.7 million African Americans morally pleads with Georgia's Board of Pardons and Paroles to consider the fact that seven key persons have recanted their stories, which undermines the verdict and conviction of Troy Davis. The Black Church strongly feels if the state continues on the road to kill this young man when there is a question of innocence, everyone associated with this possible execution God will deal with accordingly.

The Supreme Court has granted Davis an opportunity to prove his innocence, but the trial judge refused to give him a second trial. What are they afraid of? The law eloquently talks about getting down to the truth and honoring the rule of law. In this case and many others, the truth is irrelevant because the trial judge refused to grant Troy Davis a new trial which would have allowed him access to the Supreme Court to prove his innocence. The Supreme Court action is unusual; it has never been done in fifty years. NBCI urges the Parole Board to be a lover of the truth and to consider all relevant evidence in this case including the recanting of two of the key witnesses.

Rev Anthony Evans, President of NBCI says “Georgia has to make a decision here – whether it is going to embrace its cracker path or walk into the sunlight and make real the Constitution for all of its brothers and sisters in the South, and prove once and for all that the South has the same fervor for justice and peace as anywhere else in this country. Free Troy Davis.”

Southern towns have a cruel, inhumane, and racist history of executing African Americans on little or no evidence. The cases are many and the tradition is long. NBCI is hoping that the Georgia Parole Board will do something unusual that is uncharacteristic of their history and will prove once and for all that if you are Black and poor that the U.S. Constitution and the 800,000 who died to preserve during our liberties the Civil War will protect the life, liberty, and property of the least of these. God says that he has no respects of persons and the South professes a profound religious tradition.

NBCI simply asks and pleads that the Georgia Parole Board simply be guided by two principles – getting down to the truth of this case and considering Troy Davis’ case as a testament of fairness under the Southern historic dominated white law tradition and the love for our Constitution that provides the same rights, privileges, and access to the law that they have continued to provide for white male landowners.
