NBCI Stands in Support With Morehouse School of Religion

Black Church encourages all Member Churches to Support Revival

Washington DC – The National Black Church Initiative, a coalition of 34,000 churches representing 15.7 million African American churchgoers, is standing strong with the Morehouse School of Religion and its alumni in their charge to regain member status back into the consortium known as the Interdenominational Theological Center (ITC).

The Morehouse School of Religion through a series of events outside the control of leadership has been removed as an ITC affiliate. In light of this challenge MSR alumni and leadership are standing together and working hard to host fundraisers and development initiatives to revive the Morehouse School of Religion and reestablish the institution as a guiding light for the Christian community in Atlanta and beyond.

The Rev Anthony Evans, President of NBCI, is eager to help the school's revival, saying "NBCI could not be prouder to help in this effort. The Morehouse School of Religion has a great legacy in the region and across the country, and we will work with its leadership and alumni to do everything in our power to give the institution the resources it needs to nurture and education generations to come."

Interested member churches in the area are encouraged to attend fundraising events on September 12th at the National Baptist Convention, taking place at the Holiday Inn Center City in Charlotte, NC from 12:00-1:30pm.
